THIS WE BELIEVE... .

What are the professional church work vocations within the Lutheran Church? The church work vocations include ordained pastors and also commissioned ministers (a varied group serving in different roles to assist pastors), witnessing to Christ daily.

Pastors serve in the Office of the Holy Ministry given by God for the sake of the church. They proclaim forgiveness, preach and teach God’s Word, administer God’s life-giving Sacraments and provide faithful pastoral care to His people.

Commissioned ministers include Lutheran school teachers, Directors of Christian Education (DCEs), Directors of Christian Outreach (DCOs) Directors of Family Ministries (DCFLMs), Directors of Parish Music (DPMs), Directors of Church Ministries (DCMs), and Deaconesses. Let’s take a look at the roles of these servants.

- Lutheran school teachers provide quality academic and Lutheran education rooted in God’s Word to the children in their care. Currently, Lutheran schools serve over 140,000 students in the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod. They support the Office of the Holy Ministry to assist and strengthen Christian fathers and mothers in their responsibilities.
