The Patient Monarch Butterfly

A tiny egg is where it all begins for this beautiful creature. Soon there's a crack in the egg and the caterpillar emerges with an appetite! At first, he consumes the egg shell but after that it is nothing but milkweed for days and days. (It takes a lot of patience to eat the SAME THING ... day after day.)

The next period of patience is waiting while he grows and sheds his skin, time after time - only to eventually become trapped in a chrysalis or cocoon! Its stubby legs turn into slender long ones and neatly folded orange wings appear. But even when he emerges from the cocoon there is more waiting – for the wings to unfold and dry only to take off for the long journey to the Gulf of Mexico!

Patience is a big part of the butterfly's life, and our lives, too! Sometimes we have to wait and wait, accepting what we cannot change, without complaining or getting upset.

The lesson: Do something productive while you wait, have a good attitude, and don't rush the process. God is in control and has you covered!
